

Allow me to introduce myself, my name is Todd Henry and I'm your next Marketing Designer

Who is Todd?

To start, Todd is an easy-going guy. A great listener, he can easily put himself in the place of a customer or user to get all points of view. He lives for the process of design. Using all of the info and angles to create simple, targeted communication.

What are you getting?

Coming from a healthcare field in Alaska, Todd has great experience designing for a diverse and expansive population. As a multimedia production artist for five years, he has thrived wearing the different hats of web designer, photographer, videographer, graphic designer and project manager.

Why Basecamp?

When his in-house department was struggling to collaborate and manage projects, they turned to Basecamp. It has been an incredible tool and allowed them to be better connected and efficient. Todd has soft spot for working for companies that truly help people. Basecamp has a very personal voice that speaks clearly to its audience. Todd admires the heck out of that. He would love to be a part of something that helps everyone be better.
